Keynote Speaker

Affectionately known as Gina Mo, she is a Confident Communication Coach and online marketing strategist, TEDx speaking coach, and Keynote Speaker.

She helps entrepreneurs communicate clearly, confidently, and consistently in the online space about themselves and their businesses so they can make a massive impact with their work.

Her unique background includes 20 years of performance training as a classical singer, 10 years of marketing experience, 7 years of speaking experience, and 4 years of emotional intelligence training gives her the ability to help others get to communicate with confidence through the mastery of their communication skills online and in person.

She currently lives in Columbus, Ohio but originally hail from Northern New Jersey. I'm obsessed with personal development, blue-nose pit bulls, and never traveling to the same place twice.

Marketing Strategist & Planner, Pencil Point Marketing

Stacy knows all the marketing stuff. She is a generalist (which means she knows a lot about a lot when it comes to marketing.) She teaches small businesses how to market their brand effectively with customized marketing plans to build customer relationships from awareness to loyalty. Expertise: Marketing strategy, marketing plans, social media marketing, digital marketing, content marketing, local marketing, building customer relationships.

My marketing passion is to help build brands into profitable and engaging small businesses that owners can feel pride in. I think that has two phases. Building a strong foundational brand strategy with so many businesses to choose from, it's important to understand how you are different and why people should choose you. Telling people about it.

Once you have the foundation, tell the segment of the world that will care (aka marketing). but you must tell the people in a way that makes sense and the way they want to hear it (aka "strategic" marketing). I help small businesses that are ready to grow to build solid brand foundations and then develop marketing plans with activities to support their business goals.
