HOW COVID-19 HAS FUELED BUSINESS INNOVATION IN GREATER LANSING

"Greater Lansing has always featured a strong entrepreneurial spirit that has led the region through peaks and valleys for more than a century. That spirit has most evident during the COVID-19 pandemic and will continue into the next phase and beyond."

COVID-19 HAS ROCKED OUR WORLD.

Since the global pandemic slammed the U.S., our everyday lives have been disrupted. Our entire economy has been impacted in business, education, government, and non-profit organizations have seen their operations curtailed or shutdown. Healthcare has been overwhelmed in its efforts to keep pace with the onslaught of COVID-19 related cases.

Many employees have been furloughed. Remote workers have faced daily challenges of balancing their professional responsibilities with home life, and many have been complicated by issues such as having children of all ages at home, school closures, as well as Level 1 surgical masks and social distancing have been replaced by video conference.

There is a silver lining to be found during the COVID-19 crisis; it may be the surge of innovation that has ramped up across multiple industry sectors. Manufacturers retooled their ill-planned to respond to emergency calls to produce PPE, medical supplies, and as Level 1 surgical masks and social distancing have been replaced by video conference.

Restaurants and grocery stores quickly shifted to takeout and delivery service. Entertainment and cultural organizations that depend on in-person visits found ways to connect with their audiences through online platforms.

Governor Gretchen Whitmer worked with leaders in business, health care, labor, and education to develop a six-stage plan to reopen Michigan's economy. The Michigan State Government did not set a specific timeline for each phase, but instead set the central reopening of the economy to various stages of the shutdown in the pandemic.

The automotive industry, long critical to Michigan's economic vitality, could not wait as a limited base in production resumed. Manufacturers began to come back with additional safety measures and guidelines.

Edna Rapinski-based Dendrite Industries is a world-class manufacturer of metal stampings, fabrication, precision-machined components, and assemblies. Company President Jeff Metz said COVID-19 caused a 30-day in-home, which is very significant in his business. Metz says the company has taken every safety precaution since the outbreak.

"We have 200 employees, and about 75 are working from home," said Metz. "We have 200 employees, and about 75 are working from home."

Thinking about the needs for the future and combining their skills in marketing and Lansing's background in Human Resources, the couple discovered, need for immediate delivery of personal protective equipment.

"Collaboration, bridge-repairing, getting event deposits transferred, you name it," said Lansing's Metz. "Also, due to the uncertainty, no one was calling to look in the future."

The husband and wife team of Corey and Lansing Metz opened a small home-based business within the construction industry's line over one year ago. The business was going great as they were booked out for one year, and the phone wouldn't stop ringing. Then, COVID-19 brought business to a screeching halt.

"Collaboration, bridge-repairing, getting event deposits transferred, you name it," said Lansing's Metz. "Also, due to the uncertainty, no one was calling to look in the future."

"The Healthy Living Company serves as a personal protective products to organizations across the country, gloves, gowns, masks, disinfectants, etc. We are very excited to get the word out about our products and the clear vision mission that moves the needle on viral communication, including our healthy-living mission."

Based in Kalamazoo, the company is a company dedicated to transforming the health and wellness of individuals and organizations. Much of the company's revenue is derived from providing a clear vision mission that moves the needle on viral communication, including our healthy-living mission.

"If we're sales, what are we going to do," said Johnson. "Our not speaking just but until October 28, and I don't know if that's going to happen."

Johnson and the Ob Tiger Living team quickly shifted from public speaking to a multi-channel approach, scheduling 40 webinars as a means of connecting with their client base and attract new customers to their business.

Saddleback Barbecue with stores in Lansing and Okemos, Michigan, has already had online ordering, curbside and delivery since the beginning of the pandemic. Saddleback co-owner Travis Stalder assumes that restaurants will reopen dining rooms at a much lower capacity than before COVID-19. The question will revolve around how customers are going to feel about the experience.

Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Series

Dates: 2022

The Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce is excited to announce a new Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (DEI) series of programs and resources designed to empower the business community to contribute to an equitable and inclusive region. Embracing diversity, equity and inclusion makes our organizations stronger and our community richer and more welcoming.

Building and sustaining a diverse, equitable, and inclusive Lansing region is imperative for driving innovation, attracting top talent, and creating a business climate that leads to regional prosperity. The DEI series offers practical strategies for businesses looking to connect diversity to business strategy for growth in three target areas: workplace, workforce, and marketplace.

The Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce focuses on being a leading voice in educating our business community through facilitated discussions and training sessions promoting awareness of racial disparities, unconscious (implicit) bias, microaggressions, and other crucial DEI topics to an equitable regional business culture.

Questions can be directed to Ashlee Willis at MichiganPremierEvents@LansingChamber.org.

Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Series Events

Executive Roundtables

The Lansing Regional Chamber's Executive DEI Roundtables offer an intimate setting for CEOs and small business owners to confidently discuss, share advice and become educated on best practices, equity tools and approaches in strengthening DEI within their organizations.
