GRESHAM CHAMBER.ORG
Gresham has always been a plucky little town. From sawmills to berry farms, Gresham’s business community is an industrious lot, and the COVID-19 pandemic has tested their mettle. Independent retail stores like Shop Girl Consignment Gresham were hit hard with closures and like other businesses, the shop learned to pivot to keep staff and customers safe while continuing to generate revenue. Business owners also learned to lean on each other for support and information.

“The hardest part of the pandemic was being overwhelmed by the stress and anxiety of all the uncertainty and changing rules. I saw other business owners pivoting to new avenues of revenue, and I honestly just felt stuck, deeply worried how we would make it through,” Shopgirl Consignment Thea Enos said. “The shops in downtown Gresham supported each other by sending encouraging messages to each other, sharing ideas, and communicating about opportunities for grants and government funding to keep our doors open. We sent customers to each other’s places and shopped with each other as much as we could, and I wrote posts promoting the downtown businesses. At Shop Girl Consignment, we frequently ordered takeout from our local restaurants and talked them up whenever we could. I love the downtown Gresham community!”

Leslee Dirk, Broker ERA Freeman & Associates explains that her business wasn’t affected too much because real estate stayed “consistently strong,” but brokers modified how business was conducted with online meetings and COVID-safe showings. Like Enos, Dirk found ways to support Gresham businesses.

“Gresham is a tight community and people that could afford take out when restaurants were shut down would visit and purchase take-out meals as much as they could,” Dirk said. “My family would shop locally and make it a point to stay in the area for anything we needed.”

One of the hardest hit industries over the last 18 months has been veterinary services. Animal adoptions hit record numbers and pet owners were home to see possible ailments in their animal causing practices to be overbooked. Practice Owner David Hawkins from Dogwood Pet Hospital faced staff shortages from employee needing to stay home with their children when schools and daycares closed.

“We have had to work extremely hard to just see our own patients, let alone overflow patients from other practices,” Hawkins said. “We lost two emergency practices on the metro east side due to their own staffing losses and our team has had all the other stresses compounded by having to repeatedly tell pet owners that no, we can’t see your pet.
RESILIENCE

I personally have had days where I turned away 20 or more pet owners who called. For almost a year we were turning away all non-clients because we can only do so much and have to protect the staff we have.”

Though business in the veterinary industry is booming, compassion fatigue is rampant, and staff are trying their best to provide service while protecting themselves.

“We are tired. Not just my team, but the whole industry. There have been no slow periods, and nobody can get the vacations they need, as so many vacation options have their own COVID restrictions and closures, plus everyone is reluctant to leave their team short-staffed so they can take a few days off. Practices can’t replace doctors - there are reportedly 13.5 jobs per veterinarian looking now,” Hawkins explained. “The rate of veterinarian and veterinary technician suicide is climbing. We are struggling to get the medical supplies, drugs, and diets our patients need. Many practices that started to allow clients inside at least for the exams are now returning to the curbside model because of the increasing COVID threat - we never did open our doors this summer, and that upsets a lot of pet owners that take it out on us. Believe me, we help as much as we can. That’s why we are here.”

While many brick-and-mortar businesses like restaurants struggle with lockdowns and occupancy percentages, Gresham’s Sun Glow Heating and Cooling has a unique situation: fixing heating and cooling units requires technicians to enter peoples’ homes. When the pandemic hit, it had an immediate negative impact on business revenue.

“There were a lot of people concerned about the virus and didn’t want our technicians or installers in their home,” Sun Glow Heating and Cooling owner David Golobay said. “As time progressed, we saw people loosening up and becoming more comfortable with the new norm of protocols and understanding they needed these systems. After two months business began soaring, due impart to some people having more expendable income as many of them were not traveling and were receiving stimulus checks. After those first two months we have seen record growth in nearly every category of our business in both residential and commercial sectors. Golobay was proud of how rapidly Sun Glow was able to adjust to comply with protocols and offered his employees 40 hours pay, regardless of work available. The changes included remote offices and investment in a phone system that allowed remote work with ease, virtual sales, remote service calls, when possible, PPE and diluted bleach water cleanings, office disinfection and bagging all air filters before leaving the home to not cross contaminate clean air filters.

“Our clients loved how we worked hard to ensure the health and well-being of their entire household. We in fact have a lot of reviews where people have commented specifically about our COVID protocols and how it made them feel safe,” Golobay said. Like Dogwood Pet Hospital, Mt. Hood Hospice continues to face staffing shortages.

“We had to quickly put in some updates to our phones and IT services, so we had the ability to make visits through technology and do more meetings remotely and we are still having issues with staff and hiring. Though we are posting ads RNs and CNAs are not applying. It’s costing a lot of money,” Jolie Phantom, Community Outreach and Volunteer Coordinator at Mt. Hood Hospice said. “Our census has been very low, we think because of COVID people are not going to their doctors, no diagnosis of terminal illness. Less patients means less money coming in to cover administrative costs. We were able to negotiate a new lease and will be moving to a smaller, combined space in the same building, which will cut our rent fees in half.”

From March 2020 until July 2021, volunteers that visit patients to offer social and emotional support were unable to do so and offering hospice services continues to be fraught with obstacles for the nonprofit.

“Volunteers play a crucial role in the care of hospice patients, and it was detrimental to patients and families alike. Because of the mandates and vaccine requirements, almost a half dozen volunteers have decided to retire. We were planning on having a new volunteer training in September, but due to all the changes it may have to be postponed. This will also have an impact on our volunteer base and the services we offer to patients and families,” Phantom explained. “We were unable to do community events and education to help bring awareness about hospice. There wasn’t really a way to overcome this, however we have amped up our social media with educational posts. We are a small, nonprofit organization and can’t maintain functionality without enough qualified staff. We are also unable to offer hiring bonuses and things that larger, corporations can include in their packages.”
Like many Oregon cities, the Gresham area has its share of car dealers. But it would be hard for other cities to meet the generosity level or dedication to community these three auto families demonstrate. While the old clichés of car dealer salesmanship might be alive and well in other parts of the country, you will not find that in the Gresham area. Gresham Ford, Suburban Auto Group and Weston Kia, Buick, GMC — all family-owned businesses — pride themselves at being above the old school rhetoric. “Take care of the customer and they will take care of you.” Jim Weston, founder of the dealership, is a former member of the Salvation Army advisory council and has supported the army for decades. When the Salvation Army’s Phase 2 of its capital campaign came up $116,000 short, the Westons stepped up with the amount needed for completion. Jim Weston, founder of the dealership, is a former member of the Salvation Army advisory council and has supported the army for decades. When the Salvation Army’s Phase 2 of its capital campaign came up $116,000 short, the Westons stepped up with the amount needed for completion. Serving the needs of the community with this strategically placed facility was an easy decision for the Westons. All three dealerships have won their respective corporate Presidents’ Awards. All three have expanded or remodeled their facilities, investing back into the community. And all three have leadership roles in local boards such as the chamber and education foundations.

Family businesses are the heart of Gresham and surrounding towns. In this case three family businesses are competitive, generous givers and literally rev up the community across the street they went. Gresham Ford invested heavily in the community with its million-dollar remodel. The investment doesn’t stop there. Westons and her dealership are known for hundreds of volunteer hours and hundreds of dollars to local nonprofits like My Father’s House, SnowCap Community Charities, Gresham Rotary and Gresham-Barlow Education Foundation.

Suburban Auto Group, a Chevrolet store on the western edge of Sandy, is no stranger to community giving and dedication. Many Suburban Group employees, from the office to the sales and service departments, have been with the company since the beginning. Gresham residents Nancy and husband Jerry also are preparing for the future as two of their four children take their place in the family business. Daughter Erin Sowle came on board in 1996 as general manager for the Ford store and is now an owner. Their youngest daughter, Megan, began working at the dealership in recent years. “Megan’s been here since the cradle,” Nancy said. “We changed her diapers on the showroom floor.” Posing on the reins to children is a joy and blessing and can be a tricky responsibility. The Suburban Auto Group is thriving in its succession plans as it maintains a strong commitment to customer satisfaction and to supporting community nonprofit groups such as Guide Dogs for the Blind and the Mt Hood Community College Foundation.

Owning a successful car dealership is hard work. Long hours, narrow margins, stiff competition. When there is profit to be made, it certainly could be spent on fancy houses and overseas trips. But what happens in the neighborhood community is a priority to the Weston family. For the past 20 years, the Westons have loaned cars to the Salvation Army to pick up and transport donation kettles during the holiday season, as well as to get gifts to children on Santa’s good list. Jim Weston, founder of the dealership, is a former member of the Salvation Army advisory council and has supported the army for decades. All three have expanded or remodeled their facilities, investing back into the community. And all three have leadership roles in local boards such as the chamber and education foundations. All three dealerships exhibit the type of business ethic the Gresham area can be proud of — as solid employers, generous givers with long lasting roots in our back yard.
In the heart of Gresham is Main Street, a true downtown and the envy of other cities. What makes Gresham special though, is its art scene and the contributions of community members to have art reflect the history and diversity of Gresham life.

In a few short years, nonprofit Gresham Outdoor Public Art (GOPA) has improved the art landscape in downtown with carefully selected pieces. Judy Han, co-owner of Sunny Han’s Wok & Grill started Gresham Art Walk (precursor to her work with GOPA) 19 years ago and turned it over to the City of Gresham eight years ago.

“In 2013, I approached Mayor Bemis and said I needed to give Art Walk to the city, and I would mentor them through it if they would take it on,” Han remembers. “The event needed to grow and change; it was evolving, and it had a good foundation. Mayor Bemis said absolutely this event was not going to end. I always felt supported by Mayor Bemis and the City of Gresham over the years, and it was Mayor Bemis who saw the importance of the arts in the community. It’s why it is still going today.”

Now called Gresham Arts Festival, in 2019, the festival brought in over 20,000 attendees who supported Gresham businesses while at the celebration. After the city took the festival, Han approached Bemis again about bringing permanent outdoor art to Gresham. When asked if there was a map for public art, she was informed there wasn’t one.

“Mayor Bemis said if I could put an art program in place, he and the city would support it,” Han said. “Our GOPA board looked at what other cities were doing and used their outlines. We brought our plan to the city, and they stepped right up, from putting in the necessary paperwork to establishing how art needed to be placed on the street. We worked with all the departments of the city.”

Who builds a statue for an ordinary citizen? Gresham does!

— GOPA President, Judy Han
Han, President of GOPA, started asking residents for help including sculpturists Rip and Chad Caswell and Heather Soderberg-Greene, and approached organizations like the Lions Club for donations. Driscoll, the guide dog was first sculpture placed in Gresham because he trained in downtown. Next was the teddy bear on the bench in honor of the Gresham Soroptimists who run the popular Teddy Bear Parade each fall. The mural on the side of Jazzy Bagels was completed by Don Gray who explained the building used to be Rexall drug store and was the center of Gresham for years. Chad and Rip Caswell supported the project with Otter and Raven in Nadaka Nature Park and Garden in nearby Rockwood. In true community spirit, more people and organizations joined in to provide art. “Mt. Hood community College Students did a piece for us on Third Street,” Han explained. “And ‘Blue’ a heron sculpture stands watching over us on Main Ave. ‘Bless this Nest’ was supported by the Chamber of Commerce and in June, we installed a sculpture called ‘Sunday at the Carnegie,’ which depicts a couple walking arm-in-arm wearing clothing from the turn-of-the-century celebrating Gresham’s history.”

Holding a coffee delivery and in a Trailblazer jersey, the statue of Mr. Gresham, Todd Kirnan, holds a special place in the hearts of Greshamites. Kirnan has been seen walking downtown where he runs errands or delivers food to businesses. “Mayor Bemis came and asked about a statue of Todd. To many of us that have businesses downtown, Todd is especially important. He is Uber on legs,” Han jokes. “Heather Soderberg-Greene created the sculpture with funds raised from people in the community. Todd would bring me envelopes of money and say, ‘This is for my statue.’ All the funds were from local donations and when Steve Hartman of CBS News heard about it, he came to meet Todd at the unveiling. We had a parade, and it was just awesome. Who builds a statue for an ordinary citizen? Gresham does!” Han stresses that all the efforts from the GOPA board, artists and citizens was supported from all the departments in the City of Gresham. It has been a collaborative effort.

“One thought I have always had is Gresham Outdoor Public Art is the bridge and art is the vehicle that bridges people. In Gresham, 57 languages spoken. We celebrate our diversity in our community and come together to have a better understanding of those who are different than us,” Han explained. “The arts are for everybody. People say, ‘Portland is Weird’ but I say, ‘Gresham is Real.’ The art we have in Gresham is a direct reflection of who we are. It was intentional. Gresham is a big city, but it has the heart of a small-town community.”
It’s been said that East County is the gateway to the Columbia River Scenic Area, the pristine canyon carved out millions of years ago and held in care by Oregonians. And though the Gorge is a shiny gem in a treasure chest of jewels, that gateway opens to Northwest lands ready to be explored along with East County, too.

COLUMBIA RIVER GORGE

Sitting like a sentinel, Crown Point offers a front-row seat to the Columbia River and the Cascade mountains beyond. More than 90 waterfalls cascade over virgin land, river winds propel wind and kite surfers, hundreds of miles of hiking trail line both sides of the gorge from elevations up to 4,000 feet above sea level. The Historic Columbia River Highway allows for road cycling connecting Troutdale and The Dalles through 75 miles of scenic wonderment. Recreationists need sustenance and the Columbia River Gorge is lined with memorable eateries from McMenamin’s Edgefield in Troutdale to wineries and fresh fruit dotting the landscape throughout the Fruit Loop in Hood River. From stand-up paddle boarding to riding electric bicycles, recreation is only limited to imagination.

MT. HOOD AND BEYOND

If the Columbia River Gorge shines in summer, Mt. Hood obviously comes alive during winter when snowshoers, skiers, snow mobilers, climbers and cold-weather enthusiasts take to the powder. Beyond the mountain, lies ghost towns like Shaniko, the Painted Hills, John Day Fossil Beds National Monument, vast expanses of farmland, and natural hot springs. If you look close enough, you can find wagon ruts from the Oregon Trail days.

GRESHAM

From Gresham, the Portland International Airport is only 10 miles away bringing in advent-tourists from around the world to climb the nation’s third tallest mountain, Mt. Hood or windsurf top-rated swells on the Columbia River near Hood River, but don’t pass up Gresham for outdoor activities. Gresham Butte Park is the newest park in Gresham and sits atop Hogan Butte with 46 acres to explore including the “Volcanic Viewpoint” where at 930 feet, visitors can see a panoramic view of Mt. Hood, Mt. St. Helens, Mt. Adams, Mt. Rainier, and the Columbia River Gorge. In Troutdale, be sure to visit the Sandy River Delta Park, or Thousand Acres, where dogs and people can walk, mountain bike or bird watch in the off-leash area of 1,400 acres of open fields, wetlands, trails and two rivers.

EAST COUNTY BIKING

With over 350 miles of designated bikeways, Portland is a bicyclist’s paradise which extends into East County. The southeast segment of the 40-Mile Loop is the Springwater Corridor connecting Troutdale to Boring where bicyclist, runners and walkers can enjoy the greenway landscape while connecting to different parks, like Powell Butte Nature Park and Gresham Main City Park. Further east, the Historic Columbia River Highway offers some of the most beautiful scenery in America for cyclists. The Mosier Twin Tunnels (carved from solid basalt in 1921) is a 4.5 mile stretch from Hood River to Mosier and for a longer ride of 31 miles alongside automobiles, consider starting from Troutdale’s Glen Otto Community Park and end at Cascade Locks Marine Park. “Gresham offers over 47.2 miles of bike lanes, 18.8 miles of multi-use paths and two miles of Gresham Greenways,” Tam Driscoll Gresham’s Community Outreach Specialist said. “There’s ample low-speed routes on local streets that connect to local destinations. Stop at the beautiful Tsuru Island Japanese Garden located in Main City Park and there’s the vibrant historic Gresham downtown with many wonderful restaurants and businesses to support.”
