Meet David Keigley

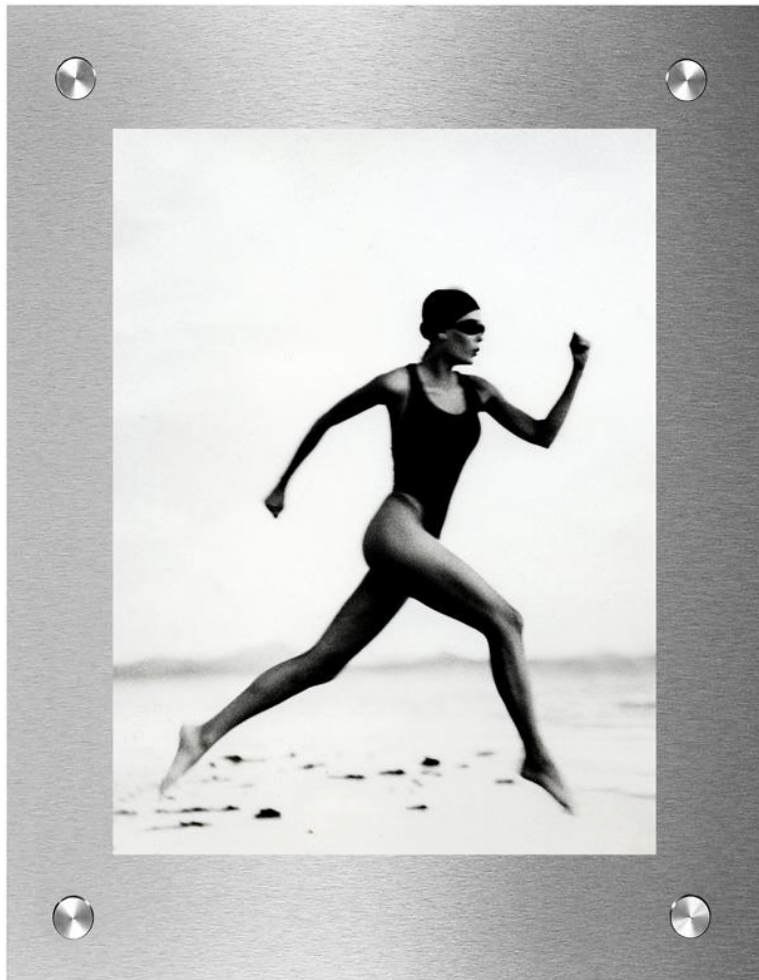

Founder, Aluma Designs

After a successful career as an international model and photographer, David was looking for an innovative way to frame his photography when he created a design so stunning, friends, family and colleagues were asking him to frame their photos as well. David decided to patent the design, and in 2003, Aluma Designs was born.

If David is the creative force behind Aluma, he would be the first to give the credit to others starting with his wife, Carri, a driving force behind the brand — helping to launch the company into custom signage and graphics.

"To be a part of a vertically integrated company that designs, fabricates, ships and installs has been a true blessing and a labor of love. I would put the team at Aluma up against the best designers and fabricators in the world. We love what we do and we love bringing a client's vision to life."

PROJECTS WITH PURPOSE

Cypress Semiconductor – Austin, Texas

Cypress Semiconductor needed a solution to display awards and news that complemented the company's modern brand.

The Aluma Architek Recognition Display System was the perfect solution. With Architect, they could display multiple awards and documents and make effortless changes as needed.

Our team of designers worked closely with Cypress Semiconductor to design and build a custom easy-to-use system. Four of Aluma's 40"x50" Architek panels were used as the base elements for this custom recognition display system. Vetro Slide frames and other custom display elements were added for flexibility. The changeable Custom UV printed Acrylic titles create an organized, professional look and allow for future redesign of the system. To re-purpose the system, Cypress can easily order new UV printed acrylic titles from Aluma and just swap them out.

Aluma's team of experts can help bring your vision to life. All our products are handcrafted in the U.S. to your exact specs.
