Our Child Well-Being Index data indicates nearly 14,000 youth are not connected to school or work. Additionally, there has been a significant decline in post-secondary enrollment after high school graduation. These youth are spread across the region and constitute a growing gap between metro Atlanta's workforce needs and the availability of future potential employees who have the training and skills needed for a career.

united Way of Greater Atlanta's InForum Series is an open forum and discussion panel event that promotes dialogue and collaboration amongst community leaders regarding the Child Well-Being Index.
