Agriculture

Panhandle agriculture is a diverse mixture of livestock and crops. Almost 6,000 farming operations cover 22,000 square miles, generating nearly $2.2 billion in sales, approximately 60 percent from livestock and 40 percent from crops. The Panhandle's land and water resources are key to the region's agricultural productivity.

Elevation ranges from 5,400 ft in the southwest to 3,600 ft in the North Platte Valley. The area is classified as semi-arid with 12 to 17 inches of annual precipitation.

Reservoirs on the North Platte River in Wyoming capture snowmelt that is delivered to over 350,000 acres of ditch-irrigated land in the valley. An additional 350,000 acres are irrigated with ground water delivered through center pivots.

Corn and hay comprise the majority of over 700,000 irrigated acres. Corn is produced on about 450,000 acres, of which 75% are irrigated.

Most of this corn grown in the Panhandle is fed locally to cattle. Corn produced in the Panhandle is also processed into ethanol. Bridgeport Ethanol can convert about 48,000 bushels of corn into approximately 137,280 gallons ethanol per day. An important ethanol byproduct for area cattle feeders is wet distillers grains (WDG). Bridgeport Ethanol fills approximately 46 semi-loads a day with WDG for use at area feed yards.

Almost 300,000 acres are devoted to hay in the Panhandle District producing almost 750,000 tons annually. Almost half of this hay production is irrigated.

In addition to corn and hay, a number of specialty crops are grown in the area that are unique to the Panhandle of Nebraska. Sugarbeets are grown on 40-50,000 acres of irrigated Panhandle cropland. The beet crop is processed by Western Sugar, a grower owned cooperative with a factory in Scottsbluff.

In addition to sugar extraction, the Scottsbluff facility includes an extensive packaging facility and a molasses desugarization plant. Sugar processing in the Panhandle provides over 500 full and part-time jobs.

Approximately 100,000 acres of dry edible beans are produced in the Panhandle. This is another unique crop to Western Nebraska. Dry bean production in the Panhandle represents over 70 percent of the state's production. Annually, Nebraska ranks first in the U.S. in Great Northern production and second in Pintos. Dry edible beans grown in the region are cleaned and packaged by three major bean processors in the Panhandle. Foreign markets are vital in marketing Nebraska's dry beans. Over one-half of the Great Northerns and up to one-third of the Pintos are exported.

Although Panhandle potato production is relatively small compared to other specialty crops, potatoes are produced on about 3,000 acres in the Panhandle. Potato production is increasing in recent years.

Over two million Panhandle acres are devoted to dryland agriculture. Given the semi-arid climate, most dryland farmers practice a two or three year crop rotation, allowing for a fallow period to conserve moisture prior to wheat planting. The predominant dryland areas are in the southern Panhandle with some acreage in the central and northern regions.

Hard, red winter wheat dominates the dryland cropping system with more than 600,000 acres in production. Forty-percent of Nebraska's wheat production occurs in the Panhandle.

Winter wheat adapts to varying conditions which gives it the ability to fit into a double-crop and relay-crop rotation systems. Hard red winter wheat is the mainly used for the production of loaf bread, hamburger buns and other foods. The average bushel of wheat weighs 60 pounds, can make 64 loaves of bread. As much as 50 percent of Nebraska's wheat is exported annually to international markets.

Proso Millet is produced on about 100,000 acres. Proso is well adapted to many soils and climatic conditions. It needs very little water and has a short growing season making it a perfect crop for this area. Proso is used for bird seed and export markets. It is also sold as health food and due to its lack of gluten and it can be included in the diets of people who cannot tolerate wheat.

Sunflowers are produced on about 30,000 acres. There are two types of sunflowers, oil and confection. The primary use of oil type sunflowers is for edible oil, but are also be used for bird seed.

The livestock industry accounts for 70% of the gross agricultural sales in the Panhandle. Over two-thirds of Panhandle land is available for grazing and supports approximately 250,000 beef cows. Panhandle feedlots finish approximately 600,000 head annually.

Panhandle agriculture is an important, diverse and interesting segment of our economy. The combination of crop and livestock production with extensive processing facilities provides much of the economic and employment base for the region. Efforts to diversify our economy are important. Land and people, however, will continue to be our most precious resources.

Business & Industry

The Scottsbluff/Gering area serves as an economic hub for Western Nebraska and agriculture is the driving force of the economy, supplemented by retail and trade services, tourism and health care. Scotts Bluff County is enjoying gradual population and housing growth, diversified employment opportunities and measured business growth. Building activity, retail sales and production in the area have remained solid over the past few years.

Retail facilities are plentiful in both cities. Many inviting shopping districts are located in neighborhoods throughout the communities, showcasing unique downtown venues and mall shopping experiences. All of your shopping needs can be met. Be sure to visit the heart of our communities in downtown Scottsbluff and Gering. Downtown Scottsbluff and Gering have active merchants association and have been renovated to exhibit small specialty shops, restaurants and gathering plazas. The West Nebraska Arts Center is a must see when visiting downtown Scottsbluff showcasing local talent in their 100+ year old building. The Historic Midwest Theater, built in 1946 was designed in by Charles D. Strong and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Gering's downtown district features shopping opportunities, service businesses, a convention center and more great dining experiences.

There are abundant businesses and a variety of eating establishments in convenient locations throughout the area including "restaurant row" in the 27th Street District. Other retail shopping districts include Beltline Highway, Scottsbluff/Gering Highway, Terrytown, East Overland Drive and the Highway 26 corridor where Uptown Scottsbluff is located. The Mall was built in 1986 and attracts thousands of shoppers each year. Uptown Scottsbluff features specialty shops, national retailers, and a six-plex movie theater.

Quality TRANSPORTATION is a primary consideration with Scottsbluff/Gering serving as an economic hub for the Panhandle. The John McLellan Jr. Expressway is part of the Great Plains Trade Corridor, a major international trade corridor stretching from Mexico to Canada. The Expressway opened in 2005, and the connection via Kimball to Interstate 80 is completed. The Donald E. Overman Terminal at Western Nebraska Regional Airport was a $4.3 million improvement project. It provides cutting edge technology and passenger convenience. In addition, there is are two flexible bus routes with the Tri-City Roadrunner Transportation System.

Education, healthcare, financial institutions and agricultural producers are all MAJOR EMPLOYERS. Scottsbluff and Gering public schools offer students a unique experience by offering Career Academies, focusing on professions needed in the community and help to offer local businesses a trained workforce.

Bellevue University, Chadron State College, Western Nebraska Community College, University of Nebraska Panhandle Research and Extension Center and UNMC College of Nursing all require and promote an educated labor force. Regional West Health Services and Physicians Clinic is the core of the region's largest medical services facility. This hospital, along with numerous complimentary businesses, provides the goods and services expected in a comprehensive source of quality health care. Many employers are locally-owned companies.

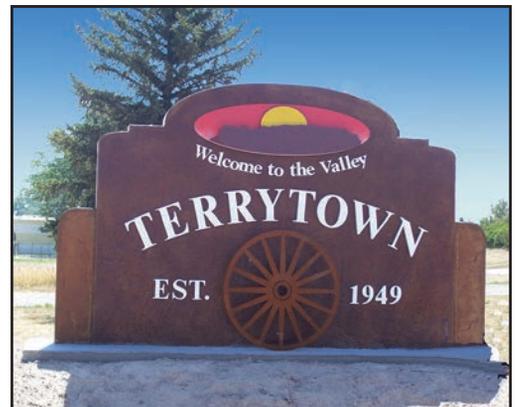

Western Sugar, WESTCO and Panhandle Coop Systems are cooperatives employing more than 500 full and part-time people. The various agri-chemical, equipment, livestock and other production companies that serve the area combine with medical, professional and financial businesses to provide comprehensive services for agriculture, businesses and the individual citizen.

The ECONOMIC OUTLOOK in the Panhandle is positive. Scottsbluff, Gering and the surrounding communities continue to grow and prosper driven by the hard work and commitment of our citizens. Western Nebraska's primary trade area, which includes 75,000 potential shoppers, has historically shown stable economic activity and spending patterns. Much of that spending takes place in the Scottsbluff/Gering area, leading to steady growth. This pattern of growth has allowed the area's infrastructure, amenities and quality of life to keep pace, providing residents with opportunities not normally associated with a rural community.

A region's future success can be predicted by the attitudes of its residents. There is a strong desire to enhance job opportunities and business development. Residents want to improve marketing assistance and work toward developing value-added agricultural products. Attracting youth with better paying jobs and providing new business opportunities were also high on the list of priorities. Environmental quality, beautification, education, transportation and affordable housing were also on their list.

This attitude of looking ahead, investing in the future, and preserving what is good in the community will serve its citizens well in the years ahead. While an emphasis is placed on improving what is already here, others are finding advantage in relocating from areas that have not taken a wise approach to growth and development. Whether it's an attraction to our quality of life or business opportunity, all are welcome and invited to share in the quality and prosperity that the Scottsbluff and Gering area has to offer.

History

This valley is rich in history, natural beauty and thriving businesses. Centrally located within these fertile acres in Western Nebraska are Scottsbluff, Gering, and Terrytown. These cities are separated by the North Platte River - Scottsbluff on the north side and the cities of Gering and Terrytown are on the south. Scotts Bluff County also includes the cities and communities of Henry, Lyman, Minatare, Morrill and Mitchell.

Wildcat Hills has panoramic views sweeping the North Platte Valley with the North Platte River meandering along the north base, and Scotts Bluff National Monument majestic and towering above the lush, green valley dotted by attractive farmsteads. From other perspectives one can see Chimney Rock piercing the eastern sky or Laramie Peak looming 100 miles to the west.

The character of this community is what makes this area prosperous and prepared for growth. It is a character shaped by a rich heritage in the building of the west. The basis of that heritage is an act of creation, since the area is gifted with a beautiful natural landmark. Because such a landmark exists, it serves as a focal point for human activities, dating back to pre-historic man and extending through the present and into the future. This landmark is Scotts Bluff which is a natural promontory rising 4649' above sea level.

The ghost of Hiram Scott lingers in the name of the Scotts Bluff National Monument, Scotts Bluff County, and the City of Scottsbluff. Scott's story has become legendary. According to early historians, Scott, a fur trapper, became ill, deserted by his companions, and somewhere within the shadow of the 800-foot bluff, he died in 1828. Scotts Bluff National Monument was incorporated into the national park system in 1919.

Between 1830 and the late 1860's, the North Platte River was the median for the two earliest east-west super-highways: The Oregon-California Trail on the south and the Mormon Trail on the North. The Oregon-California Trail penetrated the bluffs through what today is known as Mitchell Pass. After the hundreds of miles of flat prairie to the east, the vision of Scotts Bluff was a welcome sight to the early pioneers as recorded in diaries and sketches and early photographs. Still visible are deep ruts gouged by thousands of hooves of oxen, mules, and horses and wheels of covered wagons carrying emigrants and their limited possessions westward, first to Oregon and later to California where gold was discovered in 1848.

The coming of the railroads became the contributing factor in establishing the townsites of Scottsbluff and Gering. Gering was named after the town's first banker, Martin Gering and was established in 1887 at a site based on a survey by the Union Pacific Railroad. The U.P. tracks arrived in 1910. The Scottsbluff townsite was laid out in December 1899, by Lincoln Land company, a Burlington railroad subsidiary, with tracks reaching the site in February 1900.

Scottsbluff, Gering, and Terrytown serve as a regional center for agriculture and livestock production, food processing, manufacturing, finance, health and human resources, retailing, education, tourism, and recreation. The population of the primary and secondary trade area is approximately 100,000 people.

Real Estate

From its early beginnings Scottsbluff and Gering have been progressively looking to the future. Starting in 1828 when frontier trapper, Hiram Scott, died at the base of the bluff which was later to receive his name, the City of Scottsbluff has carried the name of the local monument.

Scottsbluff began in the early 1900's as a pioneer town with sod and log houses. One of the grand buildings in Scottsbluff was the Tri-State Land Co. constructed in 1907. This company was instrumental in the development of Scottsbluff by bringing industry and people to the area.

Just to the south of the North Platte River lies the City of Gering which was founded in 1887. Gering was named the County Seat of Scotts Bluff County in 1888.

Scottsbluff is a business hub as well as a regional medical center for the outlying areas from Torrington, Wyoming to Alliance and from Kimball to Chadron.

We are the "Best Kept Secret" of the real estate market - a quiet rural community located within a 4-hour drive from Denver's big city culture and mountains, close to Rapid City's Mt. Rushmore and Black Hills and Cheyenne's Frontier Days. We are also within a 1½ hour drive from Lake McConaughy, Ft. Laramie and Ft. Robinson. We enjoy small town living with friendly courteous merchants and neighbors.

Our community offers a wide variety of housing options in a wide price range. There are new custom homes, townhouses, mixed-use communities as well as apartments and rental homes. Stately older homes with charm and beauty are located near the downtown areas.

The 2020 POPULATION estimate of 36,123 for Scotts Bluff County per US Census Bureau. This ranks sixth in Nebraska in population. We believe we rank first in beauty, quality of life and resources for the future.

The area has grown slow and steady from its combined population of almost 11,000 in 1930 to over 36,123 in 2020.

Our community has more to offer now than at any time in its history. The housing market offers a large variety of types and styles of homes in our immediate area and in several surrounding areas and towns.

Towns included in our real estate marketing area include Bayard, Minatare, Gering, Mitchell, Morrill, Lyman, Henry, & Scottsbluff - all towns offer a variety of sizes and prices.

AREA INFORMATION

FAITH COMMUNITY Religious needs are met with approximately 52 churches representing many of the major denominations. Several of the churches have day-care centers, active youth organizations and outreach programs. See page 50 for a list of Chamber member churches.

housing options. There are several retirement communities that provide independent or assisted living plus full-care nursing homes. For those who prefer

COUNTRY LIVING we have several subdivisions outside of the city limits as well as acreages with farmhouses. In addition, the Wildcat Hills area offers wonderful homes overlooking the Valley with beautiful scenery and wildlife.
