CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

July 2017

Changes in income tax law may affect you

The 2017 Kansas Legislature passed a bill that makes major changes in the state's income tax law that may be important to you and necessitate additional or new tax planning.

Among the changes, the law repeals the non-wage pass through business income tax exemption, commonly referred to as the "LLC loophole" (impacting not only LLCs, but also S corporations, partnerships, and sole proprietorships), effective retroactively as of January 1, 2017.

The new law also replaces the current two bracket individual income tax schedule (with tax rates of 2.7% and 4.6%) with a three bracket schedule. Because the new brackets and rates take effect retroactively as of January 1, 2017 for the 2017 tax year, employers will begin withholding at the full 2018 tax rates on July 1 to properly phase in the effective new rates over the second half of 2017.

The Chamber has outlined the effects of the new law and you can find a summary on the Public Policy page at our website, www.opchamber.org, or click here.

However, you are encouraged to consult your tax attorney or CPA for specific advice as to how these changes impact you and/or your business and what steps you should take as a result of the new law.

#blessed

June is a month of reflection at the Overland Park Chamber of Commerce. We take a moment to measure our mid-year progress on goals, review the work of the Kansas Legislature as we prepare our Voting Record, and we have the final sessions of the Leadership Overland Park (LOP) class. I truly enjoy that last day with the LOP class as we synthesize their experience. Did their perceptions of our community assets and challenges change over the past ten sessions and six months? What were the “aha” moments? And after this deep-dive, what is their vision for Overland Park?

This year I was particularly interested in the answers as we're heading into the visioning process with our partners, the City of Overland Park and Visit OP. This 34th class of LOP was a thoughtful, diverse, and inquisitive class. I share with you some of their vision:

- Continue the priority of being a community of choice to live, work and play
- Address workforce vs residence disparity in terms of the demographics served
- Promote good public policy at all levels of government
- Increase connectivity from East to West, and the flow from North to South. What role does public transit play as we add 50,000 more people to our population?
- Increase diversity in leadership across all sectors – elected offices, civic and business for representation in age, gender, and race
- Prioritize revitalization of neighborhoods and amenities in the North.

These were just a few of the ideas noted by the class. Look for them to not only be engaged, but leading efforts that will impact our region for decades to come. Aaron Attebery, Black & Veatch, was selected by his peers to be class speaker at their graduation last month. He noted they have a responsibility to seek to understand local issues and events, not just watch the 5 o'clock news. It was important to remember that each of the issues they discussed in class impacted someone.

He told the class, their guests and employers and alumni that the City needs leaders today as much as it did when it was founded. The difference is that back then, it was a blank slate and now it's a mature city with different issues. He encouraged everyone to give back our most valuable resource – time, by saying, “We are all connectors.”

This year we changed the book that is part of LOP's curriculum to the “Heart Led Leader” by Tommy Spaulding. The focus is on who we are and how we lead others through the 18 inches that connect our heart to our head. This class embraced the philosophies of the book throughout, and I've been impressed with the depth of their discussion regarding the opportunities and challenges that lie ahead for our city, region and state. They epitomize Spaulding's message in his book which is “when we lead from the heart – when we lead with love – we care deeply about serving others, about selflessness, about doing the right thing even when it's difficult, about developing empathy and demonstrating generosity, about all those ideals that may seem ‘soft’ but, in fact, allow us to live and lead more powerfully.”

This is a class from whom we expect much. Aaron's concluding remarks at the graduation summarized it well. He said, “We live in an amazing community and we are #blessed to be part of it.”

2017 LEADERSHIP OVERLAND PARK

Class completes service project to benefit Early Education Center

by Taylor Pruitt
Bravadas Wigs & Extensions

Like all previous classes, the 2017 Leadership Overland Park class faced the challenge of identifying a community service project from the many choices and needs in our community. After much class discussion, we chose to help Growing Futures Early Education Center, a not-for-profit organization providing quality early education opportunities and family support services for children in Johnson County.

Class members met with Terrie VanZandt-Travis, Executive Director, and Megan Campbell, Development Director, to discuss the organization's needs. We became aware of an area in the play yard where brush and vines would get so overgrown in the summer kids could hide from staff. Large, in-ground planter boxes needed to be converted to sand boxes with lids, other large planter boxes cleaned out and rebuilt, a storage shed that needed trim replaced and painted and 26 concrete planters that needed rocks cleared out and plants added to soften their appearance and the fence around the play areas.

Our class went to work planning and organizing and raising funds for supplies and to make a cash donation to Growing Futures. More than $3,800 in monetary donations came from class members, their organizations and other donors. Goods and materials were donated by several individuals and organizations. Thanks to everyone's generosity, we were able to obtain all the materials needed and make a donation of more than $3,000 to Growing Futures.

Twenty-plus members of our class plus their friends and spouses gathered at Growing Futures on a hot, humid day. A class of leaders worked as three teams clearing the brush, fixing the planter boxes and the sheds. The team discovered a rock pathway in the overgrown area and several hidden hostas. We reset the pathway and split and replanted the hostas. The overgrown hiding spot became a beautiful area the kids can run through. The sandboxes became a reality, the concrete planters now full of greenery and the shed in new condition.

There were lots of sore muscles and tired bodies, but we left a happy and satisfied group seeing all we had accomplished. The only thanks we needed came Monday when we received a picture of a group of smiling young faces playing in their new sandbox.

Nominations for 2018 Class

Nominations for the 2018 Leadership Overland Park program, which will begin in January 2018, are due by noon on September 8, 2017. Completed applications from nominees will be due on October 13. The nomination form can be found at www.opchamber.org or call (913) 491-3600.

The business leaders who established the Overland Park Chamber of Commerce fifty years ago wanted Overland Park to not be just a bedroom community of commuters. They worked to transform Overland Park into a corporate center with plenty of employment opportunities. They supported facilities providing greater access to health care, and encouraged development that generated increased sales and tourism taxes paid by corporate and leisure visitors, which helped reduce the amount of taxes paid by local residents.

A Corporate Center

Within a year of the Chamber's founding in 1967, it partnered with the City of Overland Park to produce a brochure to recruit companies. Excellent schools and distinctive residential developments were increasing Overland Park's population and many of the executives who called it home liked the idea of locating their companies here, too. With ample parking, highway access, and a family-oriented lifestyle, Overland Park soon became a thriving corporate center that also spurred retail growth.

1967 – The opening of Metcalf South Shopping Center made Overland Park a retail leader, drawing shoppers from a large region. The developer envisioned a “full-range of stores, restaurants, playgrounds, and parks,” where “people shop, work, relax, meet, and have fun . . . attend meetings, inspect scientific or cultural exhibits, and maybe even dance.”

1974 – When Oak Park Mall opened, it became the largest mall in the Kansas City metropolitan area and the entire state of Kansas.

1975 – Buildings 20-24 opened in Corporate Woods, which had been conceived by partners Tom Congleton, Russ Jones, Whitney Kerr, Sr., and Richard “Dick” Wagstaff. As it developed, the office park grew to offer some of the most prestigious office space in the Kansas City metro.

1976 – With Black & Veatch doubling in size between 1971 and 1976, the company completed a six-story headquarters that was the largest office building in Kansas. By 2009, as one of Overland Park's largest employers, the company affirmed its commitment to the community by purchasing its headquarters building and embarking on a $60 million renovation and expansion that culminated with the dedication of the Rodman Innovation Pavilion in 2014.

1989 – The Overland Park Chamber Economic Development Council was established as a partnership of private investors, the City of Overland Park and the Chamber of Commerce to attract new businesses as well as expand and retain existing businesses.

1999 – The largest development in Overland Park's history was celebrated with the dedication of Sprint World Headquarters, a campus of 18 office buildings that initially consolidated more than 14,500 employees at one location. In addition to saving the company the cost of leasing more than 60 office buildings across the metro area, a goal of the consolidation was to enhance productivity by facilitating more frequent face-to-face interaction, less travel time and greater synergy among departments.

2008 – After years of resisting granting development subsidies, the City of Overland Park approved its first tax increment financing (TIF) for redevelopment of the nearly 50-year-old Cherokee South Plaza at 95th Street and Antioch Road. After completion of the project, it was estimated sales tax collections at the property would increase 400%.

2008 – The development of Corbin Park on 135th Street coincided with the devastating economic downturn of 2008. Two original tenants, JCPenney and Von Maur, withstood the recession and eventually were joined by dozens of other retail and professional services tenants including Scheels in 2015.

2014 - Prairiefire faced the same challenge as its neighbor on 135th Street, Corbin Park, when the recession stalled the mixed-used development. But Merrill Companies persevered and opened with a number of first-to-market retail and entertainment offerings and the unique Museum at Prairiefire.

2014 – The groundbreaking for CityPlace jumpstarted development of one of the last large tracts of farmland along College Boulevard. The 90-acre mixed-used development by Block Real Estate Services will feature office buildings, 1,382 multi-family units, retail space on six acres and 140 senior living units.

2017 – For the first time in Overland Park’s history, a building was imploded, bringing down the ten-story former CenturyLink building. The demolition clears the way for a new office development scheduled to open in 2018.

Health Care

When the Chamber was established in 1967, the only hospital serving Overland Park was Shawnee Mission

Medical Center, founded five years earlier. Among the directives determined during a series of “Day of Decision” membership meetings held in the first year was that “Medical facilities must be expanded.”

1978 – After breaking ground in 1976, Humana opened Suburban Medical Center as the first hospital in Overland Park. Today we know it as Overland Park Regional Medical Center.

1996 – Menorah Medical Center moved to its present Overland Park campus 65 years after opening its first hospital in Kansas City, Mo., in 1931.

1997 – Children’s Mercy Hospital opens Children’s Mercy South in Overland Park.

1998 – Saint Luke’s Health System continued its metropolitan expansion with the opening of Saint Luke’s South Hospital in Overland Park.

Tourism

Chamber leaders took to heart one of the directives from their series of “Day of Decision” meetings in early 1967 – “Meetings and conventions must be encouraged.” By July they had formed a committee for conventions, meetings and tourism and the next month announced a promotional brochure was in the works to stimulate convention and meeting interest in Overland Park.

1982 – The opening of the DoubleTree Hotel took the hospitality industry in Overland Park to a new level and approval of a transient guest tax enabled the Chamber and the City to focus on tourism as an economic development catalyst.

1983 – The Chamber establishes a Convention & Visitors Bureau division.

1984 – The Marriott Overland Park Hotel adds nearly 400 more hotel rooms.

1987 – The Overland Park Convention & Visitors Bureau (now Visit OP) becomes a separate entity.

2002 – After more than 15 years of efforts by the Chamber, City and Convention & Visitors Bureau, the Overland Park Convention Center and the Sheraton Overland Park Hotel open, giving Overland Park the ability to host regional, state and national events.

2009 – The opening of the Scheels Overland Park Soccer Complex – the only one of its kind in the country – helped cement Overland Park’s status as a top destination for youth sports, which bring considerable tax revenue to the community.
