Echoes of the past...

Follow the path of our forefathers along the historic Staunton-to-Parkersburg Turnpike (US250). Little has changed since the road was completed in the 1840s, linking the Shenandoah Valley with the Virginia frontier and the Ohio River Valley.

Union soldiers followed the Turnpike eastward, marching on the village of McDowell in May 1862. Stonewall Jackson routed Federal troops during the Battle of McDowell, marking the first victory of his hard-fought Shenandoah Valley Campaign. Come trace the movements of the soldiers who fought and died on nearby Sitlington's Hill.

...memories of a lifetime

Spectacular mountain vistas, winding country lanes, lush farmland, and picturesque villages contribute to the charm that makes Highland County special.

Discover antiques, fine arts, and crafts in quaint shops and timeless country stores. Hike, cycle, or bird-watch on trails that crisscross hardwood forested mountains and meadows carpeted in wildflowers. Fresh air, sweetened with the scent of new-mown hay, and star-filled night skies beckon visitors to Highland Country with the promise of a relaxing and welcoming change of pace.
