

Transport and logistics

Transport is about moving people and things from one place to another. Logistics is about planning and organising how to move them. Together, they make sure that people and things get to where they need to be. No exam level jobs...

Bus Driver

Bus Drivers drive a bus and carry passengers around a local area. They follow a set route and stop at bus stops to let people get on and off.

Postal Worker

Postal Workers sort and deliver mail. There are several different jobs they might do. Some go out and take the letters and parcels to homes and businesses. Others work in the sorting office.

Port Worker

Port Workers help to get people and things on and off ships. Some ships carry passengers, and others are used to move things around the world. These things are called 'cargo'. In some ports, the workers deal with either cargo or passengers, in others they deal with both. Those who deal with cargo are often called stevedores or cargo handlers.
