

Tribal Historic Preservation Funding

Our Request

$20 million to carry out the requirements of the National Historic Preservation Act. This would provide the nearly 200 federally recognized Tribal Historic Preservation Officers (THPOs) an average of $100,000 to run their programs, which create jobs, generate economic development, and spur community revitalization.

What are Tribal Historic Preservation Officers?

THPOs are designated by federally recognized tribal governments that have an agreement with the Department of the Interior to assume the role of the State Historic Preservation Officer on Tribal lands.

Tribal historic preservation plans are grounded in self-determination, traditional knowledge and cultural values, and may involve projects to improve Indian schools, roads, health clinics and housing.

What do THPOs do?

- Work with law enforcement to apprehend and prosecute looters of Indian remains and sacred objects;
- First responders when a sacred site is threatened or Native ancestors are disturbed by development;
- Create their tribe's oral history programs and operate tribal museums and cultural centers;
- Provide assistance and funding for historic preservation projects and activities;
- Locate, survey, record and maintain inventories of tribal historic resources;
- Review federal projects for their impact on tribal historic resources;
- Nominate properties to the National Register of Historic Places; and
- Lead revitalization of cultural traditions and native languages.

What is at stake?

As the number of Indian tribes with THPO programs increases, the amount of HPF funding appropriated and apportioned to THPOs must keep pace: in 1996, 12 tribes received an average of $80,000; in 2018, 179 tribes received an average of $64,000.

Reconnecting Native peoples to their cultural heritage has the power to help heal deep generational wounds. To continue historic preservation in Indian country, it is essential that THPO programs receive increased funding to meet the increasing need.
