The Hayward-Castro Valley Kiwanis Club

The Hayward-Castro Valley Club is the Local Chapter of Kiwanis International whose mission is to “Empower communities to improve the world by making lasting differences in the lives of children.” Kiwanis is about the children of the world, and the Hayward Castro Valley Club is about our local kids. The Hayward-Castro valley Club has been continuously serving the community since 1940!

The club has approximately 25 members, who come from all walks of life and age groups. The one common thing shared by these uncommon people is a personal commitment to service. We are generous with our time. We are creative with our ideas. We are passionate about making a difference. And we have fun along the way. Lots of it!

We support the Salvation Army, Scouting, Kids Against Hunger, the Alameda County Foodbank, and Unicef’s ELIMINATE project to end neonatal tetanus worldwide. We feed volunteers at the CV Relay for Life, and the Hayward Clean Up and we feed the community at our annual Pasta Feed and Pancake Breakfast. We just delivered over 2 dozen backpacks to local kids in need of school supplies.

We couldn’t do it, though without our youth groups of future community leaders. We have almost 300 affiliate members combined through our Key Club at CVHS, and our Circle K Clubs at Chabot College and CSUEB. These kids rock the house when it comes to giving to the community.

The Club meets every Tuesday from 6:30p – 7:30p at Joyful House Restaurant 3335 Castro Valley Blvd. Please come and enjoy a meal and some friendship with us and see what we do to contribute to the community and develop our future leaders. We’ll be at the Castro Valley Food Trucks event on September 3rd so please stop by and say “Hi” If you have any questions about us or Kiwanis International, please contact our club secretary, Bill Mulgrew at 510.828.3386. Small Business Tips and Tricks

3 Steps to Finding True Satisfaction in What You Do

1. Find Your Best Niche—and Stick With It

Trying to do too much too soon? Feel like you need to be all things to all clients? Maybe diversifying isn't always the best strategy. Sometimes, it's good to replicate the magic if you have something that works really well. That's been the successful strategy for Ace Apparel, says Marc Mathios, who along with his two brothers are the third generation to run the 78-year-old family business.

"One of the industry silos that we're really good in is parking garage operators," Mathios says. "The reason that parking garage operators like to work with us is because we manufacture our own line of jacket that's suited for parking garage companies. ... We've duplicated that success with 30 different parking garage operators across North America."

Finding your niche and continually innovating around that niche is a path to success.

2. Keep Your Day Job Just a Little Longer

It is a common trap: A person gets excited by a small business idea, quits his or her day job—and then runs out of money and fails.

Spanx founder Sara Blakely credits her success to the fact that she actually kept her day job as an office equipment salesperson for two years, learning to work with minimal sleep as she got her form-fitting shapewear company off the ground. Blakely did not want to resign from her day job until she was absolutely sure her small business idea would work, according to Forbes.

By the time Blakely resigned in 2000 from what was then office equipment supplier Danka, she had already spent countless nights and weekends studying pantyhose design and existing patents. She would drive from her Atlanta home to North Carolina, where she sought out hosiery mills willing to make the product.

Continued...

“There were days that I’d be at Danka all day and the semi trucks would drop boxes of Spanx outside my apartment. ... I resigned on October 14, 2000. I quit Danka and two and a half weeks later I was on the Oprah Winfrey Show,” Blakely says.

3. Avoid Distractions at All Costs

A few years ago, Seattle-based content marketing company AudienceBloom was operating so swimmingly that its founder and CEO Jayson DeMers decided he could get away with focusing on a second startup that he was intrigued with. DeMers would come to regret the decision.

“Running a company ‘just fine’ is not what an entrepreneur’s job is,” DeMers says. “Successful entrepreneurs don’t do the minimum for their company; they constantly work to grow it, evolve it, and prepare it for the future. Because I was splitting my team between the two startups, growth stalled at my first company, and I didn’t have enough time to dedicate to the new startup to make it successful.”

Eventually, the second venture failed. AudienceBloom was able to grow again once DeMers was able to focus his full attention on it. “I learned that a successful venture requires 100 percent attention, focus, and effort. Secondary ventures need a full-time manager or else they’ll just distract you and derail your existing efforts if you aren’t careful.”

Avoiding distractions applies to managing yourself so you get stuff done on a day-to-day basis too. “I know when I’m smart and when I’m dumb” says Marks. “I save the big tasks for the morning when I’m smartest, and do the monotonous ones when I’m dumb at the end of the day.” Keeping yourself organized and on-task is the real key to small business success.

CAREER PATHWAYS TRUST

The 2018 Summer Internship Programs have come to a close with great success!

The CVHS student interns shared rehearsed presentations and visual aids with parents, faculty, and other host supervisors alike. Awards for “Best Presentation” and “Fan Favorite” (as voted on by visiting adults) were earned by students from LaLanne Bootcamp and Baywood Court Retirement Community! Students went above and beyond sharing stories and experiences.

These lifechanging internships would not be possible without the support of local business and we would like to thank those agencies that gave our 30 students a chance in the real-world. Businesses in blue are current CVEA Chamber Members!
