OUR MESSAGE

SkillUP provides SNAP recipients opportunities to gain skills, education, or training that will improve their ability to attain employment and decrease their dependency on public assistance programs. The intention of the program is rapid attachment to work that leads to self-sufficiency for families.

Missouri's community and technical colleges prepare SkillUP participants for work and career paths that makes self-sufficiency possible. With more than 100 short-term programs available, SNAP recipients can gain skills, training, or experience to increase their ability to obtain regular employment.

EMPLOYERS

SkillUP engages SNAP recipients in education and training to pursue long-term employment in a new or better job. This could translate into a more efficient workplace, happy employees, and employee retention. We can provide your employees with the opportunity to learn new skills that can potentially lead to promotions. Learn more about this program by going to the website or contacting one of our participating schools.

Seven of Missouri's community colleges prepare SkillUP participants for work and career paths that make self-sufficiency possible through training and professional development. Each college offers a different range of programs and will guide participants in choosing the best pathway for their future based on interviews and testing.

This project/program is funded 50% at $1,000,000 by federal funds and 50% at $2,000,000 by local government sources for a total amount of $3,000,000. The federal funds are received from the U.S. Department of Agriculture provided by Missouri Department of Social Services, Family Support Division.
