What Do Potato Chips Have in Common With The Wizard of Oz?

1:30 to 3:00

Travel the Yellow Brick Road with 'Toga Chip Guy Alan Richer, The History Channel's Potato Chip Expert, as he explains the Potato Chip's fascinating impact on American History, Culture, and Industry. (A Pop Quiz may happen.)

Alan B. Richer is a noted historian and collector on the potato chip, and is known as the "Toga Chip Guy." Alan is available for presentations on this tasty topic with an interactive, educational and entertaining presentation that includes almost 400 photos of his extensive collection of chip memorabilia. He will discuss the origins and chronology including the mythology surrounding the invention and share his presentation of his extensive collection of memorabilia and collectibles.

Alan has consulted for and appeared on the History Channel show "The Food That Built America" in episodes about Burgers, Frito-Lay, and Pringles. He has been interviewed on ABC, CBS, Fox, NBC, the German TV show GALILEO, the Boston Globe, various radio, television stations, books, newspapers, magazines and podcasts, and he and his collection have been featured in a Vice Media produced commercial. He publishes a weekly blog entitled "My view of the world through the prism of the potato chip." Together with the Saratoga Springs, NY Lions Club, he put on the Chip Festival where most of the major domestic chip companies displayed their products and attracted thousands of attendees. The products were judged in various categories by a panel of chefs including the Dean of the Culinary Institute of America. He has addressed universities, museums, historical associations, cooking competitions, private parties, and senior groups. See his website, TogaChipGuy.com or his blog on his Facebook Page at <https://www.facebook.com/TogaChipGuy/>.

His business has expanded into consulting. Alan's experience in documenting the history of many companies has provided him with a rich background on which he draws to help others identify issues and create solutions. He receives calls and emails from all over the world.

Mr. Richer is retired as Senior Tax Counsel-Global Tax Initiatives Leader for General Electric Company based in Albany, NY. He is the recipient of a GE Tax Lifetime Achievement Award as well as a Charter Member of the GE Tax Value Added Tax Hall of Fame. He is a graduate of the Syracuse University School of Management, summa cum laude with Honors, and the Syracuse University College of Law, magna cum laude. Mr. Richer is a Charter Member of the Arthur L. Johnson High School (Clark, NJ) Hall of Fame.
