New Houston LGBT chamber of commerce forms

Feb 19, 2016, 12:14pm CST

Houston has many different chambers of commerce that identify with different geographic regions and demographics. Beginning this spring, the LGBT community will have one as well. Roughly 3.3 percent of the Greater Houston area identifies as lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgender, according to a recent Gallup poll, but there is no chamber of commerce that represents and promotes LGBT-owned businesses, said Tammi Wallace, co-chair of the steering committee.

"There's an LGBT chamber of commerce in Austin, San Antonio and Dallas," Wallace said. "Yet we don't have one in Houston. Being one of the largest cities in the country, we need a chamber."

The Greater Houston LGBT Chamber of Commerce will have a soft launch Feb. 24, as part of a joint event with the U.S. Small Business Administration and the National Gay & Lesbian Chamber of Commerce. The Business Builder event is intended to give LGBT business owners a chance to learn more about resources from the SBA, business growth and other tools.

The official launch for the LGBT Chamber will be sometime in May, but with the Super Bowl less than a year away and its emphasis on promoting local, minority- and women-owned businesses, the decision was made to start a little earlier, Wallace said.

"As an LGBT business owner, I know a lot of others that are business owners, but we don't connect over business," she added. "This is going to create the infrastructure that's needed to build on."

The Greater Houston LGBT Chamber of Commerce is expected to officially launch later this spring.
