CHRISTINE CICIO

Chris Cicio is the Director of Continuing Education at Penn State Abington. She oversees professional development training, custom training for organizations, and youth programs. Prior to arriving at Penn State, she worked at Rutgers University and managed training programs for national, state, and local government employees. Prior to her time at Rutgers, she worked at Prevent Child Abuse New Jersey where she designed and delivered research-based workshops throughout New Jersey. Chris specializes in building community partnerships, identifying strategic opportunities, and implementing new initiatives.

Chris holds a bachelor's degree in sociology and masters of public administration which were both obtained at Rutgers University. She is an advocate for lifelong learning and strives to provide people with the skills they need to succeed in their careers.
