2023 ASIS&T Asia-Pacific Annual Meeting Successfully Held

On December 23, 2023, the ASIS&T Asia-Pacific Chapter (ASIS&T AP) held its annual meeting. The conference's theme, "The Inheritance, Integration, and Innovation of Information Science in the Context of Artificial Intelligence Development," seeks to promote information science's advancement as well as its use and innovation in the artificial intelligence field. The conference is organized by the ASIS&T Asia-Pacific Chapter Committee and held by the Department of Information Management, Peking University.
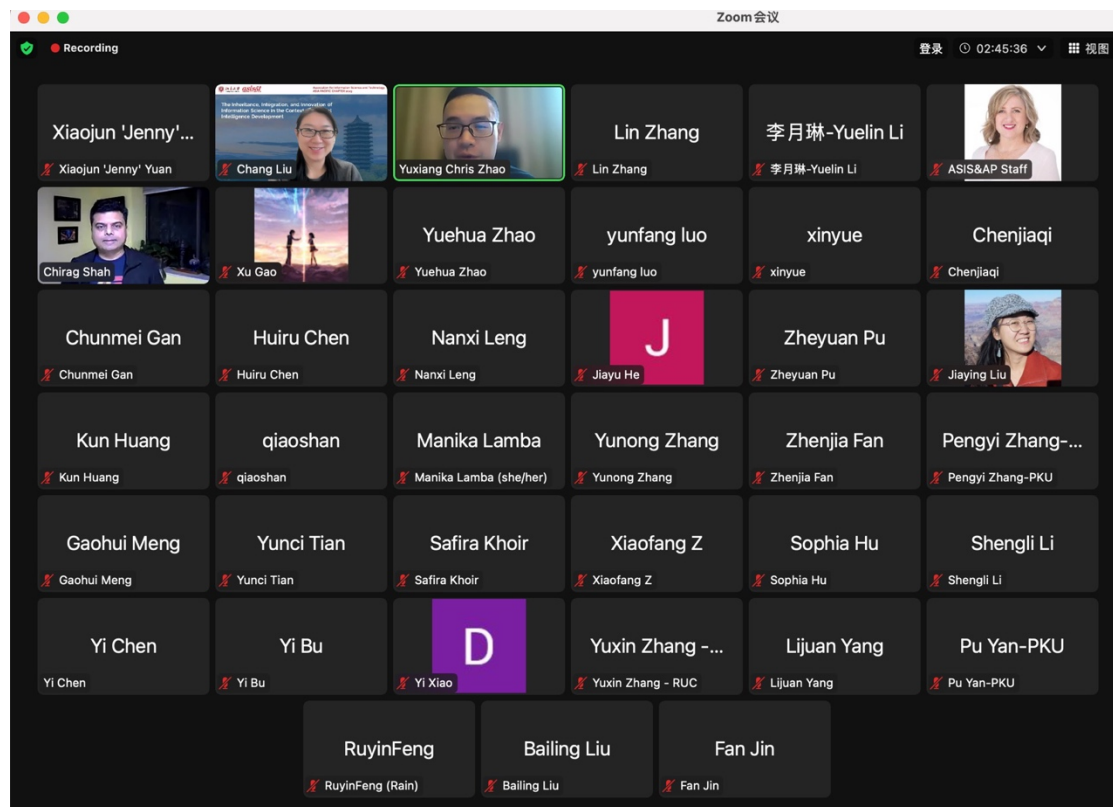

The opening ceremony was hosted by Professor Chang Liu (Department of Information Management, Peking University) , the ASIS&T Asia-Pacific Chapter Chair for 2022-2023, and Professor Jiuzhen Zhang, Chair of the Department of Information Management, Peking University, delivered a welcome speech. A series of keynote presentations followed. Firstly, Professor Jun Wang from the Department of Information Management at Peking University delivered a speech on "Humanities Research in the Age of AI: From Text Driven to Data Driven." Professor Yuan Xiaojun from the Department of Information Science and Technology, University at Albany, State University of New York, USA, gave a speech on "Older Adults' Adoption and Perception of Advanced Technologies." Professor Lin Zhang from the School of Information Management at Wuhan University delivered a speech on "Open Science: Lessons Learned and Perspectives for the Future." Professor Chirag Shah from the School of Information Studies at the University of Washington, USA, gave a speech on "AI-Driven Information Access: The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly." Finally, Professor Yue-Lin Li from the Department of Information Resource Management at Nankai University gave a speech on "User Perception and Interactive Behavior in Health Information Searching." The invited keynote speeches were moderated by Professor Yuxiang Zhao (School of Information Management at Nanjing University), the Chair of ASIS&T Asia 2023-2024.

This year, the ASIS&T Asia-Pacific Chapter called for papers from all over the world, with the participation of researchers from China, U.S., the Netherlands, Sweden, and Japan. The submitted papers were peer-reviewed by the conference organization and revised by the authors. Finally, a total of 23 papers were presented orally at the conference, covering a wide range of fields, including artificial intelligence, information behavior, open science, etc. Six sub-forums were set up for the conference, which were Developing LIS, Transformative Technologies, Health and Consumption, Diverse Social Media, Behavior in Action, and Novel Reading.
At the closing ceremony, Director Ding Nian of the Editorial Office of Data Information

Management Journal, the supporting journal of the conference, read out the list of papers to be accepted. Prof. Zhao Yuxiang, the chair of the 2023–2024 chapter, announced that next year's annual conference would be held at Nanjing University and introduced the new committee members.

The ASIS&T AP annual meeting fosters the growth of multidisciplinary research in the fields of information science, library and archival science, management science, communication studies, computer science, etc. and offers an open forum for the academic community, highlighting the region's research vitality.
